

GGM NEWSLETTER May 2023

This year has started out strong, and the leaders have covered many different events so far. Ranging from events as big as 68,000 hearing the gospel at the Super Bowl in Phoenix, Arizona, to a few hearing as we preach on College campuses and at local street festivals. At all these events, there have been divine conversations to go along with the Gospel proclamation. Some of these conversations last five minutes some continue as we go back to the same locations every week.

I want to briefly share the story of a young Biology major on the NC State Campus. He started stopping by the preaching around three weeks ago. He asked straightforward questions about the Christian faith and shared why he needs Christianity to be a good person. This is where I challenged him, and he came back the following week with more questions.

This is just one story out of many that occur weekly because of your faithful giving to this ministry. Without our monthly champions, prayer partners, and donors, the preaching, and the sharing of the Gospel all over the world could not take place. God is using you to make a difference for His kingdom through this ministry. I just want to say sincerely, thank you. In this newsletter, you will receive a Harvest Field Update, an article from me on the similarities of the Old Testament and New Testament, and how this should change the way we read the Bible, you will get an update on our Ten Year Vision and what is needed to make this a reality, and I will briefly talk about our New curriculum and how to receive it.

I will put my law within them, and I will write it on their hearts. And I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

Two Different Deliverances

Our job as preachers and teachers are to motivate Christians by showing them how the Bible all ties together in one harmonious unit.

In February, we looked at the point of origin—of how any human being is made righteous. In March, we saw God working through scripture to remind us of similarities in the Old Testament theme of Israel’s inheritance and His coming messiah. Finally, we will see the two big pictures of redemption that allow us to be truly human (April). You can find all these articles on the blog section of our website.

Why did I put the phrase “being truly human?” I think many people refuse to come to terms with the reality of the origin of creation and the spiritual realm that communicates that a creator continually reveals Himself to us. When we come to terms with our Creator’s communication to us—creation and the Bible—it is then, as a creation, that we understand what it means to be truly human. I am not saying that people are not human, because, obviously they are. However, they are a shell of who they can be when Jesus gives them life and frees them from sin’s slave market. They are grapplers longing for the real thing until they get life and freedom from Jesus. It is impossible to receive it from the world because sin and culture have confused and convoluted the path to life and liberty.

In this article, I want to look at the life of Joseph and how it parallels the life of Jesus. When Christians see the parallels between the Old Testament and New Testament, the Bible begins to come to life, and our understanding gives us the desire to read it more. We see it as a symphony of poetry, Historical narrative, prophecy, wisdom literature, and epistles—letters written to the early churches. Like a symphony with many instruments, they make one piece of music together. All 66 books of the Bible tell us one story: God created man, but man sinned, so God had to come and free us through the sacrifice of Christ. It is a theme that runs throughout all of scripture.

God is so creative in weaving this theme into real people’s lives in the Bible to leave us longing for the one who was to come. As we read, Joseph is betrayed by the hatred of his brothers, and they treat him wrongly. However, Joseph still delivers humanity from famine and eventually symbolically comes out of Egypt with his people. This puts us in a mental position to understand why God directed the life of the God/Man Jesus the way He did. Let’s compare how both Joseph and Jesus were betrayed by hatred.

Update On Our Ten-Year Vision

We are in the second year of our ten-year vision. It is proving to be harder than expected. However, anything that is easy can be done with man's strength; what we seek can only be done with the Lord's strength. We are striving to have leaders in all six zones of America by 2025. We should have three of the six covered by the end of the year.

This is where you come in. If you know any pastor who would like us to come in and train his congregation to be more effective in sharing their faith, have him reach out to me at tommygospelgm@protonmail.com. When I visit the church it is then that I am introduced to the evangelist. It will take all of us networking together to make this vision a reality.

My latest curriculum- Questions And Evangelism- will be the most beneficial curriculum I have written yet. It is designed to help people use questions to guide the conversation leading to you sharing the Gospel. I want to show people that we can defend the faith by just asking questions and allowing them to see the absurdity of their Worldview.

Questions And Evangelism Our New Curriculum

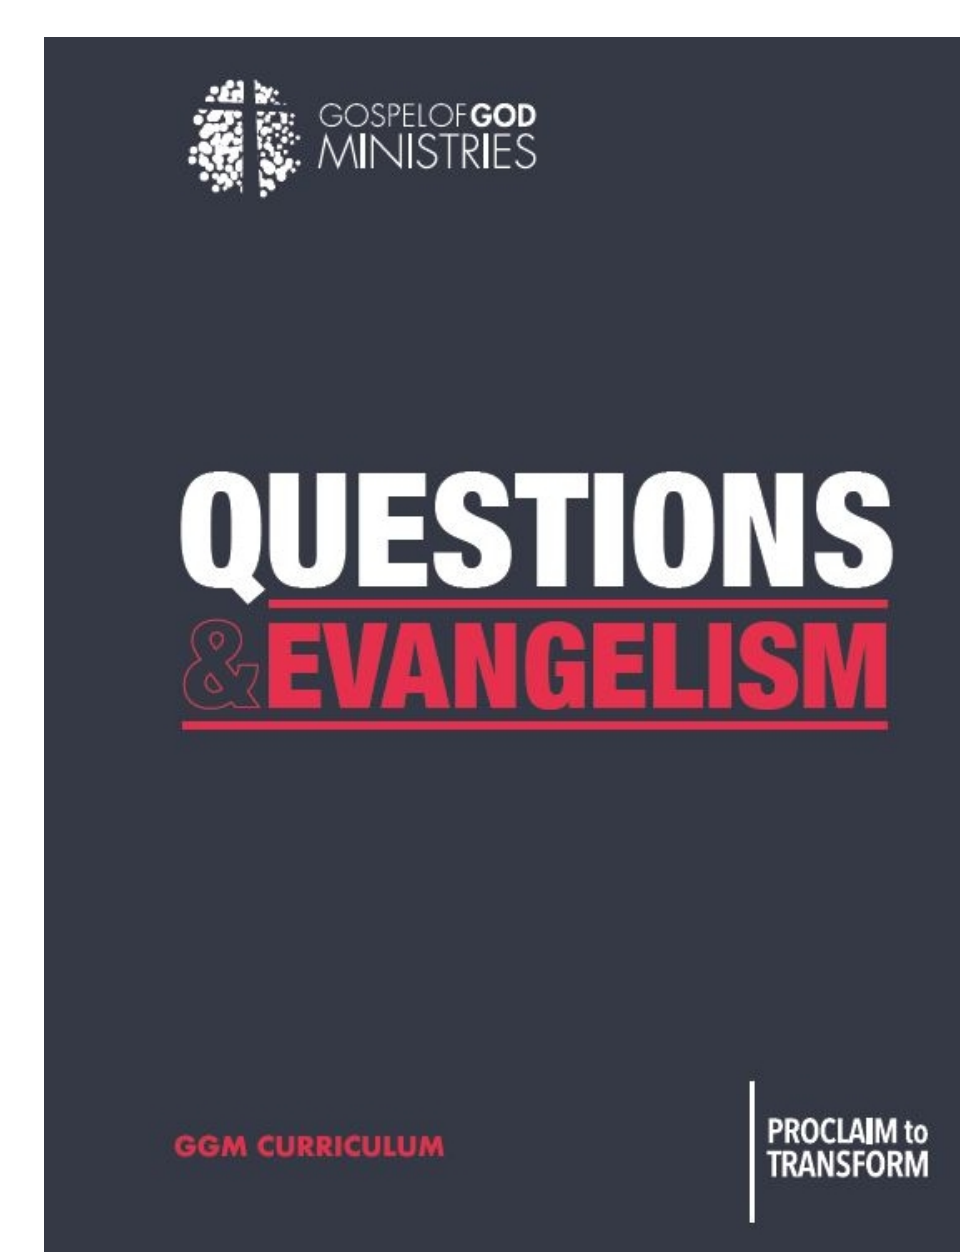

I met the three people- in the above picture- at a festival in my local city. I started the conversation with a question from one of our tracts. I desire to show how easy it is to start a conversation and to keep moving it in the right direction with just a few questions. This is why I have written Questions And Evangelism.

This curriculum will help you understand how questions are used in the Bible and give principles to help you use questions to start Gospel-centered conversations. We are to remain faithful to the truth, and God will handle the rest.

Becoming a monthly champion of any amount gives you access to all eight curriculums and all the news content we put out monthly—videos, podcasts, articles, and any future curriculums that are written. We want to help you successfully share your faith by changing your mindset. Questions And Evangelism will help you do this.
